BLACK STUDIES

The central mission of the Black Studies program is to prepare students to critically understand, conduct research concerning, and interpret the complex histories, societies, and cultures of people of African descent in the United States, Africa, and the Diaspora. We situate this knowledge within a general discourse concerning what it teaches us about the totality of the human experience.

Other Information
All coursework taken for the Black Studies major or minor must be completed with a grade of “C-“ or better.

Majors and minors in BLST are not allowed to receive departmental credit towards that designation for courses they complete on either a Credit/ No Credit, Audit, or Satisfactory/Unsatisfactory basis. In such cases, students will be asked to add additional BLST coursework to their academic curriculum as surrogates for the number of hour credits earned under such alternative arrangements.

Upper Division Course Contingency
In the event that an insufficient number of courses are available at the upper division level for a student to complete a major or minor, the chair of the department may, at his or her discretion, accept alternative departmental courses, external courses dealing with subject matter related to the major or minor or external experiences in course settings like internships, study abroad, and/or community engagement as acceptable for meeting the requirements.

Assessment
As part of its assessment program, the Department requires the following of majors:

• Each major must complete at least one community-based activity consisting of a study abroad, service learning, and/or internship experience under the appropriate department course numbers.
• Each major must select one paper from their 3000 or 4000 level courses as their major departmental project.
• Specifications for all of these assessment requirements are available from the department.

Student Groups
Black Studies student groups cater to the interests of majors and minors as well as other students interested in the field of Black Studies and membership is open to all students.
